"We then called on Rear Admiral Swift. He said he was very glad that we came and promised to investigate it thoroughly. Paymaster Auld did not mention the occurrence until the following Sunday morning. It was a gross insult to me and to Dr. Ames."

Mrs. Cowles declares that Rear Admiral Swift took the charges to Washington and must have pigeonholed them, for, she says, Secretary Meyer knew nothing of them when she called on him January II.

Reported To Swift.

Dr. Ames investigated the affair December 18, and sent his report to Rear Admiral Swift. Rear Admiral Swift came to Washington two weks later, The report did not reach Secretary

"Dr. Ames asked me," said Dr.
Cowles, "as did Rear Admiral Swift,
if there was any way that reparation might be made for the insult of Auld.
I said that I would consent to leave the matter in Dr. Ames hands, and have it pressed until justice was done."
Dr. and Mrs. Cowles returned to Boston last night and were much surprised upon reaching there to learn that the story had leaked out from here, as they had consented not to say anything until the official action of the Navy Department should become known.

Miss Madeline Swift is not in Pittsburg, as has been reported, but is in Boston at the home of her brother, according to Mrs. Cowles.

Her Chopin numbers were beautifully given, while her rendition of her countryman, Dohnanyi's fanct-fully eccentric "Toile Gesellschafft' (Crazy Combany) brought her auditors to a state of tense enthusiasm.

Debussy's symphonic "Jardin sous la Pluie" (the Garden in the Rain) which is a delicious fanciful piece of musical expression, was given with an airy grace and charm apprepriate to the text, while Merkler's Valse Intermezzo, a number demanding a tremendous digital skill, served admirably to demonstrate Miss Mero's right to virtuosity—a claim she approaches with a becoming mien.

The concluding numbers, Liszt's Hungarian Rhapsodie, probably the only number on the program familiar to the audience as a whole, served to return Miss Mero for an encore to which she responded with Chopin's nocturne in E minor.

From childhood I was distressed and humiliated by an unwelcome growth of hair on my face and arms. I tried all the depilatories, powders, liquids, creams, and other rub-on preparations I ever heard of, only to make it worse. For weeks I suffered the electric needle without being rid of my blemish. I spent a great deal of money on various things in vain, until a friend recommended a simple preparation which succeeded where all else falled.

I then advised its use to other friends who found it just as successful.
